A final component of “The Micronesian Question” project is the film and discussion series, in which the Council will screen seven films that focus on diverse issues of cultural representation, racism, and education, as well as tell stories that reflect experiences of Micronesian and other Pacific Islander immigrants. Each film presentation will be followed by a facilitated discussion with panelists from local Micronesian communities.

ABOUT THE PROJECT:

The migration of Micronesians to Guam over the past twenty years has presented a number of perceived challenges to the larger Guam community that have focused on such complex, and oftentimes contested issues as adaptation, discrimination and identity.

Through the multifaceted project, “The Micronesian Question”: Issues of Migration, Identity and Belonging on Guam, the Council examines the many issues surrounding the migration of islanders from other parts of Micronesia to Guam. The lives and experiences of Micronesian in their new island “home” are also explored. The project launched in September 2010 with youth-centered photography and creative writing workshops. The works of 57 youth participants were featured in the exhibit In-Sights: Words and Photos by Micronesian Youth.

The project also included the Council’s Motheread® family literacy program and most recently, a reading and discussion tour in August with visiting Micronesian scholar and poet, Dr. Teresia Teaiwa.

Dr. Teaiwa is a Senior Lecturer of Pacific Studies at Victoria University of Wellington in Wellington, New Zealand. The reading and discussion series included a presentation and discussion - Pacific Islander Migration and Identity with readings by Dr. Teaiwa and Emelihiter Kihleng.
THE FILMS

TAMUNING SENIOR CITIZEN CENTER

Papa Mau the Wayfinder
Directed by Na'alehu Anthony
2010 Paliku Documentary Films (50min)

Papa Mau the Wayfinder recounts the fundamental role that master navigator Mau Piailug played in reawakening Polynesian pride by teaching Hawaiians the dying art of traditional navigation without the aid of instruments. Sail along on this remarkable journey of an iconic voyaging canoe and of a renewed people, both guided by the wisdom of Papa Mau, the master wayfinder who breathed life back into the sails of Polynesia’s voyaging tradition.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 19, 6PM
MANGILAO SENIOR CITIZEN CENTER

Micronesians Abroad
2009 Micronesian Seminar (90min)

Micronesians Abroad visits the homes and workplaces of Micronesians who have moved away from home. The documentary offers a sunny picture of emigration and glosses over deeper challenges such as economic problems, community tensions, and ethnic discrimination that Micronesians experience abroad. Join our panelists for a discussion that critiques the way Micronesians are portrayed in such films.

LOCATION TBD

Morning Comes So Soon
Directed by Aaron Condon & Michael Cruz
2008 Small Island Films (125 min)

Morning Comes So Soon, the first feature film from the Marshall Islands, is a love story about a Marshallese boy and a Chinese girl. The film was made by a pair of American volunteer high school teachers at Majuro's Catholic Assumption High School, working with a local peer education group, with a grant from UNESCO. The directors cast local people in the film about teens grappling with racism and suicide on the small central Pacific atoll.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 6PM
LOCATION TBD

Children of the Migration
Directed by Lala Rolls
Island Productions 2004 (78min)

Through candid interviews and rare archival footage Children of the Migration tells the stories of the Pacific Island immigrants who came to New Zealand from the 1950s - 1980s and changed the cultural landscape of Aotearoa.

O Tamaiti
Directed by Sima Urale, 1996 Paewai Productions (14:16min)

Sima Urale’s debut short film tells the eldest child of a Samoan immigrant family, who is expected to play guardian to his siblings. As his parents struggle in their new country, he is overwhelmed by the responsibility. Inspired by her own experience as a child growing up surrounded by relatives struggling with Samoan and Western cultures, O Tamaiti, is about the unconditional bond among children in Pacific Island families.
